- The Cambridge Journal of Regions, Economy and Society publishes multidisciplinary international research on the spatial dimensions of contemporary socio-economic-political change. The Journal adopts a focused thematic format. Each issue is devoted to a particular theme selected by the international editorial team. The aim of the Journal is to understand the formative changes and developments associated with the new spatial foundations of today's globalising world. It also examines how changes in the global economy are playing out across different spatial scales. Each issue is prefaced by an introduction from the Editors on the topic covered. Authors are encouraged to engage with the public policy implications of the issues they address. The Journal is keen to encourage articles from a diverse range of theoretical perspectives. Within this remit the Journal will publish papers that include one or more of the following:
